BOOK SYNOPSIS

Major excavations undertaken in the 1950s and 1960s in the Kalambo River basin on the border between Zambia and Tanzania revealed one of the richest and most complete records of human settlement in Africa. This, the third and final volume of the excavations publication, focuses on the earliest cultures belonging to the Middle and Earlier Stone Age dating from c.9550 BC. An aim of the volume is to provide as full a record as possible of the large lithic assemblages, most of which is illustrated, and so create an unparalleled study of lithic industries in the Zambezi region during the Late Quaternary period. The fourteen contributions also examine the geology and environmental remains and discuss the significance of the site as a whole and place it within the context of prehistoric Africa.
